Rabbi's Message

This year we all will surely treasure the early signs of spring a bit more than usual. After this very cold, snowy, and long winter, it is a relief to be experiencing more temperate days and to be witnessing the shift towards the heart of spring. The snow has finally melted and the crocuses are pushing through the ground. And a sure sign of spring, the matzah and macaroons are filling the grocery shelves, as we will soon be shopping for Passover foods.

While Passover primarily marks the Exodus from Egypt, the celebration of the redemption of our ancient ancestors mingles with our embrace of spring. Of course, this season is a time of renewal. Therefore, it is no accident that Passover falls in the spring. As we feel the beauty of the season, watching the re-budding of our gardens, shaking free of the cold of winter, we sit at our Passover Seder tables and remember the gift of freedom. In that moment, we recognize all of God's blessings.

The Passover Seder includes many symbols of spring. Found on the Seder plate, the Karpas - the parsley, or any other greens - overtly represents springs. The Beitzah - burnt egg - represents the festival offering brought by our ancestors to the ancient Temple in Jerusalem. The egg also reminds us of the beginning of all life and, therefore, connects to the hope of renewal we feel in the spring. The Seder itself includes many readings which draw upon the imagery of spring.

As we sit at our holiday tables and enjoy the Seder with family and friends, we can revel in the spring symbolism this year. For families with young children, the kids can embrace this spring motif by creating vernal-themed decorations like centerpieces and place cards for the Seder table. Parents and grandparents can help children understand the connection between Passover and spring. Fortunately, parents have an easy job of communicating the association between spring and Passover, as the Haggadah simply leads us through the signs and symbols discussed above. The Haggadah is the ultimate instruction manual and pedagogic guide. Parents are left with an important job, however, to engage their children and to model interest and excitement. Looking over the Haggadah in advance will help the parent feel comfortable with this task. Planning for opportunities to have the children participate (especially the four questions) is also essential.

Adults can emphasize the spring/Passover connection by lingering over Haggadah readings like Song of Songs and Psalms. We can also play games throughout the Seder with all age groups by challenging everyone to guess how many references the Haggadah has to spring and then track them throughout the night. Adults and children should also free feel to add to the four questions with some spring/Passover related questions. We can also share our personal reflections on the transformation from the bleak winter to the robust spring and how it makes us feel. Then, connect those feelings to the theme of freedom.

I hope spring and Passover will bring each of us renewed energy to embrace our blessing of freedom.

L'Shalom,

Rabbi Mary Zamore

This is the place to learn about events at the temple and beyond, see photos of recent events, find links to interesting articles, and more. While the temple's website is still a great place to get information about upcoming events, download forms, or find archived copies of the newsletters and past monthly messages from the Rabbi and President, our Facebook page expands our ability to communicate. You can send us a message about what you'd like to see on the page, or ask a question (Rabbi Zamore and others will see it) and get a response.

President's Message

Mitzvah is a word that is often used by Jews. Our temple requires our b'nai mitzvah students to each participate in a "Mitzvah Project." I ask, what does "mitzvah" mean and, with the upcoming holiday of Passover, how can one perform a mitzvah?

Mitzvah, in its primary meaning, refers to the commandments given in the Torah. However, we more commonly think of mitzvah as an act of human kindness. Our kids' mitzvah projects have included volunteering at local food pantries and at homeless and animal shelters, raising awareness and funds for life threatening diseases, supporting Israeli soldiers, and assisting families in need within the community where we reside or in places as far away as Africa. In addition to participating in community service projects in their hometowns or through their employment, our adult members perform mitzvahs in our Jewish community by serving on temple committees, volunteering at PTO events, and reading Torah at the High Holidays. Our contributions of time, money, and good deeds, have us walking away feeling good.

With the exception of our annual Sunday School Model Seder, Passover is not typically celebrated or commemorated at temple like other Jewish holidays. The Seder takes place in the family home. It is customary, and indeed a mitzvah, to invite guests, including strangers, to attend a Seder. Many interfaith families may not host a Seder; some may feel they lack the ability to lead one and others may physically not feel up to the task to prepare for Passover and the Seder. The ideal mitzvah would be to ask a fellow congregant if they have a Seder to attend this year and, if they do not, to invite them to join your family Seder, to together recount the story of Moses, and to enjoy the festive meal together.

My family's most memorable Seders have been those where additional chairs (and sometimes tables) have been dragged into the dining room, where we must squish together and share Haggadahs. Please let me know if you have no plans to attend a Seder this Passover or if you have room at your Seder table for an extra chair or two.

Wishing everyone memorable Passover Seders and a happy Pesach. Chag Sameach.

Yom HaShoah Speaker & Commemoration

Sunday, April 27th at 11 am

Join us as we commemorate Yom HaShoah, Holocaust Remembrance Day, with guest speaker, Claude Hagelberg, who was a true witness to history. In an age-appropriate presentation for 4th grade and older, Mr. Hagelberg will recall his childhood in Constance, Switzerland, directly over the border from Germany. With family on either side of the border, he has a unique perspective on the war. As a middle school boy scout, Mr. Hagelberg was asked to board a train to greet survivors. Come hear directly about his compelling experience. We hope Sunday School parents and adults from our greater congregation will join us for this important program and commemoration as well.

Education/PTO

March was a very busy month for Education/PTO.

It started with a fun-filled Confirmation retreat led by Rabbi Zamore and chaperoned by Hannah Finkelstein. There were many laughs, games, bonding experiences, and yes, tons of snacks!

The Purim festivities were enjoyed by many! The day began with an entertaining skit performed by our very own Rabbi Zamore and Student Cantor Lilah, the Megillah reading, and the always unforgettable Purim Spiel (to an oldie-but-goodie, Grease) led by Debbie Fesinstine and her marvelous crew.

The Purim Carnival that followed was a huge success. The efforts were led by PTO Chair Marci Braunstein and her Carnival Committee Co-Chairs Barrie McMullen, Pam Fitzsimmons, and Susan Santillo. Thank you to all the parents who helped with desserts, signs, activities, and setting and cleaning up.

Special thanks to the Confirmation and 6th/7th grade class helpers: AJ, Alex, Hailey, Grace, Jill F., Jill W., Jonathan, Lauren, Sabrina, Tyler, and Derek.

At the Carnival there were new activities, in addition to some old favorites. This year we even included pizza on the menu! We had awesome Tricky Tray baskets, thanks to the class and congregation participation.

We hope you join us for the remaining Shabbat Services of the school year, and we especially hope to see all of the Sunday School students at our year-end celebration for meeting the Shabbat Service attendance requirements.

Thank you!
